LEVEL 3
You describe something or somewhere in good detail – your reader can ‘see’ what you are describing quite well.

LEVEL 4
You describe something or somewhere in very good detail – your reader can ‘get an accurate mental picture of see’ what you are describing.

LEVEL 5
You also start to explain WHY places are like you have described, why certain things happen there or why people do things using KEY WORDS.

LEVEL 6
You talk about both the physical and human geography (dealing with one at a time) using key words when describing and explaining.

LEVEL 7
You both describe and explain what places are like and why they are like this, why certain things happen and why people do things PRECISELY. You use key terms and say how people and the environment come together, interact and influence one another. You say how people in one place could affect people in other parts of the world and you have ideas about how things might change in the future.

LEVEL 8
On top of all this you have very definite and well backed up ideas about how and why things may change in the future and how this change could be managed in order to benefit everybody and the environment.
